LIBERIA PAYS OFF WAR DEBTS IN FULL

LITTLE REPUBLIC MAKES SETTLEMENT WITH $35,600 CHECK

No Concessions Asked
By Nation When
Debt Is Paid

WASHINGTON, July 6.—For the first time in the hectic history of American war debt negotiations, a nation came to the United States treasury today and tendered a check for its entire obligations, plus interest.

The Republic of Liberia, with a population of but 4,000,000, mostly negroes, presented to Acting Secretary of the Treasury Mills a check for approximately $35,600 in settlement of its entire obligations to the United States.

Liberia obtained advances of $26,000 from the United States under the Liberty Loan Act. On this amount something over $9,000 interest was due at the time of the settlement.

A letter from Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, congratulating the tiny republic on its accomplishment, was made public by Acting Secretary Mills. It was pointed out at the treasury that the Liberian settlement was relatively as great a burden upon that nation as that of the funding of the huge war debts of the British and French.

No concessions were demanded—simply a check representing the entire obligation was presented.

Back of the settlement lies a rubber concession by the Liberian government to Harvey Firestone, tire manufacturer, who has been among the first producers in America to take definite steps to break the British rubber monopoly in the far east.

Last fall Firestone obtained the right to an old British rubber plantation of about 900 acres and in addition 1,000,000 acres of undeveloped rubber land in Liberia. The combined plantation is said to be the largest in the world outside of the far east.

According to a statement issued today by the Firestone interests the plantation represents an investment of $100,000,000. At the present time this corporation employs about 12,000 men in Liberia. It was stated that eventually this force will be increased to 300,000, representing about one-thirteenth of the entire population.

As a result of the Firestone development the Liberian government recently floated a $5,000,000 loan in New York. The proceeds of which were partially used to pay off outstanding obligations.

Representatives of the Firestone corporation said that the potential production of the Liberian tract would be approximately 300,000,000 pounds annually or the equivalent of 60,000,000 automobile tires a year.

The American consumption of rubber in 1927 is now estimated at about $50,000,000 pounds. The manufacturers of United States use more rubber than any other nation but are chiefly dependent upon the British monopoly for their supply of the raw material.

While some rubber is being shipped from the section of the Firestone plantation on the old British concession, heavy production will not be possible for about five years according to the statement.

LIBRARY JANITOR NOT UNDER CIVIL SERVICE IS RULED

COLUMBUS, O., July 6.—The janitor of a library building of a county library district is not within the civil service classification of state, county, city, or city district employees, and may be dismissed at the will of the board of library district trustees of such district, without the necessity of charges being filed.

This ruling was given to the state civil service commission by Attorney General Turner, who was informed that the commission had received a request for an opinion on the subject from Prosecuting Attorney Marshall, Greene County.

Commissioner Marshall, the commission told Turner, wrote the commission, in part as follows: "The Xenia Library Association, which is organized under the laws of Ohio as a corporation not for profit, but for library purposes only, after operating several years, became short of funds and, in 1913 made an agreement whereby the county commissioners were to make a levy for the maintenance of the library and the trustees of the association made a conveyance of the real estate and, also, the personal property, including books, to the commissioners in trust for library purposes."

"However, the janitor was not under civil service until, probably eighteen months, or two years ago. This janitor has not been satisfactory and charges of incompetency can be established."

FIVE MORE ACCUSED IN GEORGIA BEATING CASE BY GRAND JURY

Indictments Are Found
Against Men In Whipping Case

TOCCOA, Ga., July 6.—Another chapter in its investigation of recent activities of hooded and robed floggers in this county was written by the Stephens County grand jury here, when it returned seven indictments against five men, charging them with having administered a whipping to Barto Singleton, farmer, March 11.

Ten indictments against five men were returned yesterday in connection with the flogging of Mrs. Ansel Bowers and her fifteen-year-old son, June 11.—Two other cases in which women were victims of bands of floggers are to be investigated later.

W. G. Acree, principal of the county high school at Eastonelle, who was one of those accused in the case of Mrs. Bowers and her son, also was indicted in connection with the attack on Singleton. With him, in two joint indictments charging attack with intent to murder and riot and separate bills charging pistol-carrying were named "Jim" Adderholdt, Moses Jordan and Hendrix Wiley, farmers, and Barton Lowry, factory worker.

Singleton, who previously had sworn out warrants for the men, accusing them of having participated in the attack on him, told authorities he was taken from his home at night by a band of hooded men wearing white robes and severely flogged with a leather strap after being charged by his assailants with bootlegging.

Each of the five men previously had been arrested in connection with the Singleton case and are at liberty under bonds of $300. New warrants were issued for them following the grand jury action and their arrest is expected soon.

DIVORCEE DYING, LOVER KILLS SELF

BELLEFONTAINE, O., July 6.—Mrs. Rose Pickering, 35, a divorcee, was reported near death in a hospital here today, with a bullet wound through her body, and John Christian, a rejected suitor, was dead, as the result of a shooting at the woman's home last night. Christian came to the house and shot the woman, after she had called police earlier in the evening, complaining that he was annoying her. He then turned the gun upon himself and died instantly. Six children survive Mrs. Pickering.

ATLANTIC CITY HIT BY FIRE; $225,000 DAMAGE REPORTED

Six Hotels Among Buildings
Burned As Guests Flee

ATLANTIC CITY, July 6.—Six hotels on Arkansas Ave., eight amusement resorts on the boardwalk between Arkansas Ave. and Missouri Ave., an exhibit building and a bath house were destroyed last night by fire. The damage is estimated at $225,000.

The hotels, frame structures three and four stories in height, were the Larchmont, Armstrong, Prescott, Leonard, Lutz and Regent. A brisk southwest breeze, which assisted the firemen to keep the flames from the $1,000,000 pier across the boardwalk, the Columbia Hotel and other large structures adjacent, drove the fire through the buildings on Arkansas Ave. with such velocity that many of those in the hotels had no time to save their belongings.

Six hundred persons in all were routed from the buildings as one after another burst into flames.

The fire enveloped the exhibit of the Remington Arms Company, in a building at the boardwalk and Missouri Ave., and the building, in which 20,000 cartridges were stored, caught fire. The crowd which had surged upon the smoldering boardwalk despite the efforts of the police, withdrew hastily as the cartridges began to explode.

Firemen and policemen rushed into the burning building and carried out the packing cases containing the ammunition. Although many shells were detonated, all those still in the packing cases were taken out.

In the burned area, near the hotels on Arkansas Ave., was a parking place for motor cars. All but one of the cars was saved. Young's Baths, an old bathhouse in this neighborhood, burned.

Eight large brick buildings in the block in which the fire spread withstood the flames. One of them, at the boardwalk and Arkansas Ave., housed an incubator babe exhibit, with forty-one infants, under the glass inside. Spectators, including women who came from the Hotel Shelburn, rushed into the building and carried out the babes.

Patrolman Thomas Hutchinson was appealed to by a frantic woman, who said her little girl still was in their room in one of the hotels which was burning. The policeman ran into the structure and searched for the child for several minutes. He retired only when the floor began to sag beneath his feet and, stumbling in the smoke, fell down a flight of stairs. He was injured seriously and was taken to City Hospital.

The building collapsed in a few minutes after he had left it. The child found later in another hotel, which was not reached by the fire, was restored by her mother.

LABORATORY FEES OF SCHOOL UPHELD BY TURNER OPINION

COLUMBUS, O., July 6.—"In view of the fact that laboratory fees have been exacted by school authorities for many years without question, I am of the opinion that a board of education may, in its discretion, prescribe rules requiring pupils in the public schools to pay reasonable incidental fees to cover the use of material and the breakage of test tubes, etc., used in laboratory work."

Attorney General Edward C. Turner held in an opinion given to the officials of the bureau of public inspection of schools.

"Such rules must be reasonable and not such as to exact tuition fees under the guise of mere incidental fees," Turner continued. "No charge, however, can be made for the use of apparatus owned, or used, by the board of education."

Turner held that in the enforcement of such rules, consideration must be given to provisions of Ohio laws which, in effect, require school authorities to furnish textbooks and other personal necessities, including medical care and essay to extend to children who are unable to attend school by reason of the inability of their parents, or guardians, to furnish the same for them.

"No such child should be, or could be, required to pay any incidental fees as a condition precedent to its receiving the benefits of a laboratory course," declared Turner.

WILE SAYS:

Governor Nellie
Tells Of Defeat
Fighting the G. O. P.
Friendly Enemies

By FREDERIC WILLIAM WILE
Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright 1927

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Nellie Taylor Ross, of Wyoming, first woman to be elected governor of an American state, is now narrating on the Chautauqua platform her hitherto unknown details of her brief political career. Speaking this week in Maryland and Virginia towns near Washington, Mrs. Ross charged the Republican party acting through its national organization, with bringing about her defeat for re-election last year. The former Wyoming executive declared that the G. O. P., fearing it might become necessary during 1927 or 1928 to fill the place of Senator Francis E. Warren, was determined that no Democratic governor should appear in his successor. Mr. Warren is 83 years old this month and is serving his sixth successive term. He is the father of the senate.

"During my gubernatorial year," said Mrs. Ross, "I vetoed a bill passed by the Republican legislature which sought to deprive the governor of the right to fill a vacancy in the United States senatorship. The bill provided for special elections for that purpose. There was no attempt to repeal it."

COMMANDER IS MADE MEMBER OF LEGION OF HONOR IN PARIS

Honor Higher Than Given
Lindbergh By
Government

PARIS, July 6.—In the name of the French government, Premier Poincare today decorated Commander Richard E. Byrd as an officer in the Legion of Honor.

The premier congratulated Byrd and his three co-flyers on their flight from New York to Ver-sur-Mer, France, terming it one of the crowning achievements of the age. Sheldon Whitehouse, United States Charge D'Affaires, was among those present when Poincare bestowed the coveted honor on Byrd.

Byrd, his pilot, Bert Acosta, G. O. Noville and Bernt Balchen, visited the premier shortly after breakfast. Their stay with the premier, who is far behind on his official duties, was brief.

The medal was pinned on Byrd at 9:30 a. m. Byrd's decoration is a grade higher than that given Charles A. Lindbergh, New York to Paris flyer, because, it was explained, Byrd is a naval officer, older than Lindbergh, and already is the wearer of several high decorations.

In decorating Byrd, Poincare gave the commander the usual klax on both cheeks.

Balchen told International News Service that there is no truth in the report that he is planning a flight from New York to Oslo, Norway, next year. Oslo is Balchen's home and his aged mother now lives there.

"I never thought of such a thing," said Balchen.

GIRL DANGLES FROM PLANE IN MID-AIR; NARROWLY ESCAPES

Succeeds In Second Parachute Leap From Airplane

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., July 6.—Dangling at the end of a rope 2,000 feet in the air for a half hour, Miss Evelyn Barrett, 19-year-old Minneapolis girl, narrowly escaped death when the pilot of an airplane from which she attempted a parachute jump, landed his plane in a plowed field.

Uninjured and undaunted by her narrow escape, Miss Barrett, a telephone operator, demanded that she be permitted to try again. Her second attempt was successful.

Employed to entertain a crowd of 3,000 at a country Fourth of July program, Miss Barrett climbed out on the wing of the plane as it soared 2,000 feet and swung off. But the rope holding her parachute to the wing strut had been tied in a slip knot and her efforts to loosen it tightened its grip.

"When she didn't jump at my signal I knew there was something wrong," said R. D. Ellis, pilot of the plane, "and I doubled back on my course. She didn't jump the next time either, but just swung back and forth."

Another pilot on the ground took off and attempted to fly underneath Ellis's plane and rescue Miss Barrett, but the wind was too "bumpy" and he finally was forced to land.

Finally, his gasoline running low, Ellis headed for a plowed field a mile away, where he made a safe landing in the soft dirt.

STEPHENSON TELLS STORY OF INDIANA POLITICS AT PRISON

Prosecutor Gets Information That May Involve
"Every Politician In The State"—May Involve Governor.

MICHIGAN, CITY, Ind., July 6.—David C. Stephenson, former Klan leader and political boss in Indiana, has made good his threat to tell what he knows about Indiana politics and politicians.

For four hours he told his story to William H. Remy, prosecutor of Marion County, and three of Remy's assistants, here in the state prison, where Stephenson is serving a life sentence for the murder of Madge Oberholzer.

What he told Remy and his associates still is the secret of Stephenson and the prosecutors. But Stephenson's readiness to talk was apparent as soon as he met his interviewers in the prisoner's interview room adjoining the warden's office.

"I'm going to put every politician in Indiana where I am," he is quoted as saying.

That statement was regarded by some as not the slightest doubt that Stephenson, in his statement, has tried to do just that to every politician with whom he formerly was associated and who he feels now has not stood by him.

Stephenson sent this message to newspaper correspondents: "I am getting lonesome here for some of my old playmates. There is a vacant chair in the chair factory right beside mine."

Remy and his fellow prosecutors refused to make any formal statement regarding what took place behind the prison doors, but they came from their interview with Stephenson smiling.

When Remy was asked whether he was going before the grand jury with the information given to him by Stephenson, he grinned and replied: "We are merely gathering evidence today."

It was evident, however, that he had made a considerable step toward obtaining from Stephenson information regarding Indiana's public affairs which he has been trying to worm out of him ever since last fall, when Thomas H. Adams, editor of a Vincennes newspaper, published allegations that brought about a series of grand jury investigations in Indianapolis.

What names or acts Stephenson mentioned to Remy are not known, except it was learned authoritatively that Stephenson "did talk about Governor Ed Jackson." There was no intimation that Stephenson's remarks concerning the governor were detrimental to him.

Prior to Stephenson's imprisonment he was a warm personal friend of Jackson and threw the support of the Indiana Klan behind him in his gubernatorial campaign.

The charges are said to be based on the claim that both Barr and Dr. Chambliss drove unnecessarily fast through Jamestown streets Saturday on their way to investigate an automobile accident east of that town, sometime after the accident happened.

Before going to Jamestown to answer the charges, Coroner Chambliss said he was hurrying to the accident scene to procure pictures to be used in an inquiry into the accident. He said Barr had been instructed to hurry to the scene to prevent removal of the automobiles involved in the accident.

WILL INVESTIGATE CHARGES OF UNFAIR METHOD BY RAIDERS

Complaints Filed By Council Say Accused
Falsely Held

DAYTON, O., July 6.—Preparations for a thorough investigation into all phases of the raids conducted here by federal dry enforcement officers Saturday night, Sunday and Monday were being made today.

Federal Judge Benson W. Hough announced that the investigation would be conducted and that all evidence of irregularities by the raiding officials would be submitted to the federal prohibition department at Washington, D. C.

Decision to conduct the probe was made after complaint had been filed with Judge Hough by Attorney Irving Delsamp, of this city, who charged that many Dayton men and women were improperly arrested, spirited to jails outside of Dayton and held 16 hours, or more, without opportunity to consult with counsel. Delsamp stated that no charges were filed against some of the prisoners and that a number of them were held in prison 75 hours.

Judge Hough directed attention to the fact that federal prisoners cannot legally be held more than 48 hours without a charge being filed against them.

Circumstances surrounding the issuance of warrants in connection with the raids may, also, be probed, it was indicated. At least one local official of the Ohio Anti-Saloon League may be involved in the proposed investigation, it was stated. Alleged information, gathered by Anti-Saloon League authorities, was turned over to federal dry officials prior to the raids, it was claimed.

Counsel for persons arrested by the raiders claimed that this alleged information together with private purchases of liquor by "under-cover" agents for prohibition enforcement authorities, did not legalize the arrests.

CLEVELAND NEEDS MORE POLICEWOMEN

CLEVELAND, O., July 6.—Cleveland needs more policewomen, said Captain Henry, head of the women's bureau made this statement before a luncheon of the Associate club here, saying that the present number of policewomen in Cleveland was insufficient to cope with prevention of present day delinquencies—the most important work of the women's bureau.

"We have now fifteen policewomen," said Captain Henry, "but all of our time is taken up with emergency calls. We have no time to do any patrol work which is very necessary in prevention of delinquencies."

"All but three or four of the 220 girls we are asked to find last year are still missing," Captain Henry declared. "Girls usually leave home because of a feeling of homesickness combined with unsatisfactory home conditions. In some cases they run away to be married."

BIBLE THOUGHT

THE HOPE OF YOUTH:—For thou art my hope, O Lord God then art my trust from my youth. Psalm 71:5.

DRAMATIC ACHIEVEMENT

"In another year, American companies will be covering more mileage than all the rest of the world put together," predicts Charles L. Lawrence, President of the Wright Aeronautical Corporation. Mr. Lawrence, perfecter of the famous Wright whirlwind engine with which both the America and the Spirit of St. Louis are equipped, believes that Lindbergh could easily have extended his flight for the 4,500 mile trip to Rome. He is quoted as saying, "Chamberlin and Levine actually traveled more than 4,100 miles without a stop. Within a couple of years engines will be produced which will be able to go 6,000 miles without a stop. The longer mileage, in my opinion, will be made possible by building greater fuel economy into engines, and by constructing planes which will have a larger carrying capacity per horse power."

He continues, "The Lindbergh and Chamberlin achievements will help American airplane builders to get into foreign markets, including Europe, which until the flights lacked confidence in the products of distant manufacturers, preferring planes and motors made nearer home. The most immediate result will be to help us sell motors and planes to South American governments and private enterprises. Our company was already doing some business in South America, but these dramatic achievements will clinch the argument concerning the superiority of American products."

"Lindbergh dramatized the new status of aviation, and made an impression on the popular mind which is infinitely more effective than endless statistics concerning the relative safety of aviation. It will have far-reaching business results. It will help to break down resistance on the part of those who are asked to finance the establishment of new air routes."

HIDDEN TALENTS

You may be a failure because you are not aware of your own ability. Doubtless, a mule has no idea how hard he can kick until somebody fuses him up a bit.

Once there was a woman who suddenly became a widow of sorts because of the sudden departure of her husband for unknown parts. He had become dyspeptic and fatigued of living with her because of her bad cooking.

Thrown helpless upon a pretty fair kind of world, she turned for assistance to only thing she knew about, which was cooking, and made so great a success of her talent powers that she was forced to give herself a French name. Circumstances had developed her talent. If she only had known that she possessed it, she might now have a husband who would dole out to her $10 a week for household expenses, instead of being a poor, weak woman who scarcely has strength enough to carry her cash receipts to the bank each afternoon.

The moral in this is that a valuable gift may be encased in brown wrapping paper.

The Way of the World

By GROVE PATTERSON

GIVING AT THE RIGHT TIME

Nathan Straus, New York, great giver to good causes, quotes this maxim: "What you give in health is gold; what you give in sickness is silver; what you give after death is lead."

One who can afford to give has a right to the pleasure which comes with generosity. He has the advantage of being able to see that his money is spent as he would have it spent. Giving, in health, is the happiest giving of all.

IT ALL DEPENDS

What is wealth? You have millions but don't realize it. A multi-millionaire, stranded in the midst of a wide desert, would barter all his riches for a drink of water. The poorest American laborer, with a bit of a home too come to at night, is rich compared with a Chinese coolie.

Some day the rays of the sun may run dynamos to heat and energize the world. What, then, becomes of the coal owners? Wealth is comparative. It depends on environment. Americans, adding up what they have, find they know little of material poverty.

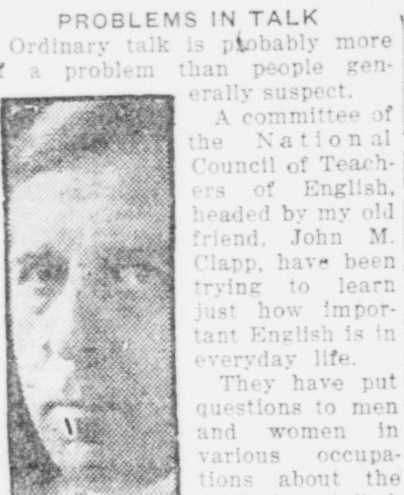

Real poverty is poverty of appreciation, poverty of imagination, poverty of the soul.

Home Ain't Like It Used To Be

KELLYGRAMS by FRED C. KELLY

Diet and Health By Lulu Hunt Peters MD. Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet for Children."

PROBLEMS IN TALK

Ordinary talk is probably more of a problem than people generally suspect.

A committee of the National Council of Teachers of English, headed by my old friend, John M. Clapp, have been trying to learn just how important English is in everyday life.

They have put questions to men and women in various occupations about the difficulty of finding the right phrases in which to say what one may wish to say.

Replies to such questions indicate that most people face a troublesome problem whenever they try to express themselves.

Being able to use good grammar isn't enough. Those who speak faultless grammar are often the least sure of themselves when they try to carry on a conversation. The trick is to hit upon the right words for the use at hand.

Here are a few of the difficulties mentioned by various people:

"To be concise without being abrupt. Brevity is often mistaken for rudeness and begets hostility."

"I find myself using old phrases I have always used, and feel I need fresh new words for each conversation."

"It's hard for me to phrase questions to bring out the desired information."

"Giving a report to a superior is a nervous strain. I elaborate too many unimportant details."

"Oral instructions to a servant are equally misunderstood."

"I can get acquainted with people quickly, but then do not always know what to say next."

"I cannot formulate my thoughts into words quickly enough to contribute to general conversation."

"It's hard to keep to the point. I use too many words to cover the ground."

"I never know what to say to girls."

Few of us are like Calvin Coolidge and say nothing. We talk enough to have plenty of practice. Yet we don't learn. We keep right on using the wrong tools.

A WHOLE MEAL

I don't know how true it is, but I have heard that Chop Suey, that very popular dish served in Chinese restaurants, is not known in China; that it originated in San Francisco. At any rate, the Chinese are certainly enterprising to concoct it for us here. It is a good wholesome dish, and apparently is one of the favorites of the F. F. E's (Friendly Fat Fraternity). For I have had more queries as to its caloric value than for any other single food.

While I was at Battle Creek recently, Chop Suey was one of the frequent dishes made in the cooking school, and I will give you their recipe. I made it myself once. (And sampled it every time it was made—I love it!)

Their recipe, of course, is a vegetable one, and if you prefer to use lean meat instead of the vegetarian "meat" or protose they use, the caloric value would not be changed much—probably a few calories less, for the protose is made with nuts. (Dear Dr. Kellogg would say it was utterly spoiled by the change. Perhaps 'twould be for some; many are improved by going on a vegetarian diet.)

Chop Suey Mix the following: One-half pound protose, browned in one-half inch cubes. Four medium onions, sliced. Twelve stalks celery, one-inch cubes. One can mushrooms. Then add the following Brown Sauce: Five tablespoons of butter. Four tablespoons of Savita (or Vegex). Two tablespoons molasses. Six level tablespoons soy sauce. One and one-half cups hot water. Two cups strained tomatoes. Melt butter, and flour, pour in hot water and other ingredients and stir until thickened. Pour this sauce over the first mixture and cook for one and one-half hours in a slow oven.

Remove from fire and add two cups of canned soy beans seed sprouts and fourteen water chestnuts thinly sliced, and reheat. This recipe is very large—about fifteen to twenty servings.

You see, with all the vegetables and the Savita (a yeast extract, very high in vitamin B.) and the nourishing protose, this is a very wholesome dish, and it sure is good.

A serving of four and one-half ounces counts approximately 100 C. (22 protein, 45 fat, 33 carbohydrate). Not so high, is it? You'll want twice that amount.

You should serve plain boiled rice with Chop Suey. Rice, one-half cup, counts 100 C.

A dish of this sort is what we can call a one-piece meal, and you don't need anything but the rice and a fresh fruit or vegetable salad to complete the main part of the meal.

(The canned sprouts and canned water chestnuts are imported, but you should be able to get them at any large grocery store.)

I think this recipe is more delicious than any of the chop suys I've eaten at the Chinese restaurants. I don't know what the sauce is that is used in the restaurants, but if you're reducing, I suggest you count it about 25 C. a tablespoonful. If you're underweight, why don't count it at all! (The chances are, if you're underweight, you don't care much for dishes with so much savor to them. That's one of the things you've got to do is to learn to like more things to eat.)

Tomorrow I'll tell what you do in case you can't get the sprouts or the water chestnuts.

The Theatre

Miss Pauline Lord, for her work in "Sandalwood" and "Mariners" was last week presented a gold plaque as the best actress of the year in the opinion of Manhattan daily newspaper critics, and Alfred Lunt, for his work in "Juarez and Maximilian" "Ned McCobb's Daughter," "The Second Man" and others, was presented a similar plaque as the year's best actor.

Actresses honorably mentioned in the critics' ballots were: Alice Brady, "Sour Grapes"; "The Witch," "Lady Alone"; "The Thief"; Ruth Gordon, "Saturday's Children"; Rose McClendon, "In Abraham's Bosom"; Helen Mencken, "The Captive"; Ethel Barrymore, "The Constant Wife"; Lynn Fontaine, "Pygmalion"; "The Second Man"; Jane Cowl, "The Road to Rome"; Blanche Yurka, "The Squall."

Actors honorably mentioned: Walter Huston, "In Abraham's Bosom"; Morgan Farley, "An Chosen Judge of the 'Kangaroo Court'"; established at the county jail by his fellow prisoners to preserve order in their ranks. Spriting on the floor, profane language, and loud arguments are the offenses of which the prisoners with more tender susceptibilities complained. "Bootleggers are the worst offenders," McKay said. "Their business makes 'em tough; but this court is going to handle them all. And its verdict will be enforced."

Murray Phillips has announced he will soon present a revival of "Madame X." This was a favorite vehicle of Sarah Bernhardt, Ethel Terry, and many other tragediennes. When Pauline Frederick returned to the legitimate theater in England recently, she chose it for her play, and was rewarded with an ovation. In the present revival, Carroll McComas will play the title role, supported by Rex Cherryman, late of "The Noose" cast.

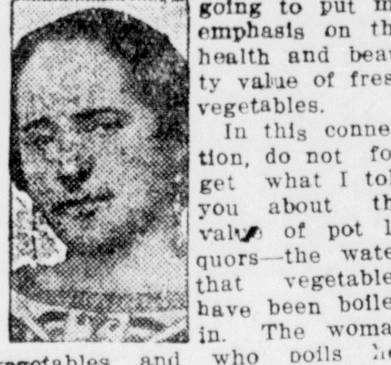

Eva Le Gallienne announces the following new plays for her next season's program: "The Good Hope," from the Dutchby Herman Heijermans; "Two Plus Two Make Five," from the Danish by Gustav Weid; "Invitation au Voyage," by Jean Jacques Bernard; a U. S. comedy not yet selected, Ibsen's "Hedda Gabler," in which Clara Eames, formerly of the Theatre Guild, will alternate in the title role with Miss Le Gallienne.

Lillian Gish, 31, film actress and George Jean Nathan, 45, dramatic critic, contributing editor of the "American Mercury" have both denied their engagement, persistent reported, but agree they are just good friends.

How to Achieve Beauty by MME. HELENA RUBENSTEIN

Health And Beauty Benefits Of Fresh Vegetables

Yesterday I emphasized the value of fresh fruits, and the day before I told you of the benefits that could be gained from Nature's warm weather drinks. Today I am going to put my emphasis on the health and beauty value of fresh vegetables.

In this connection, do not forget what I told you about the value of pot liquors—the water that vegetables have been boiled in. The woman who boils her vegetables and who boils her then pours water they were cooked in down the sink is throwing away the most beneficial part of the food. But if anything is more valuable than pot liquors or a good dish of cooked vegetables, it is the raw vegetables themselves.

I hope some day we will all put the kitchen range away in moth balls for the summer, as we do our fur coats, and that the woman who entertains her guests at a summer luncheon will have courage enough to pass around a dish of raw carrots and a glass of lemonade.

Certain prominent actresses claim the carrot is one of the greatest beautifiers Nature has to offer. And yet how few of us, comparatively speaking, have carrots served very often at our meals.

Fresh spinach has long been called the "broom of the stomach" and the water in which spinach is cooked is full of health-giving properties.

Fresh cabbage is another vegetable which, though very inexpensive, is one of the best to be had from a health standpoint. There are so many delightful ways to serve new cabbage that it is too bad not to take advantage of the important vitamins it contains. A delightful manner in which to prepare cabbage for a summer luncheon dish is as follows: Take a head of new cabbage with just enough of the center removed to make a dinner salad, steam the head and then stuff the center with rice and tomato sauce. You will find this dish both delicious and nutritious.

Just at this time of the year, when so many new vegetables are to be had for very little cost, there is no excuse for not serving an abundance of them at all meals and enjoying the benefits they impart to your digestive system.

Many Minds Significant Sayings OF THE DAY

"I feel that the time is very propitious for this visit of the Legion. The attitude of the French people has changed materially since last August when I was there before. Deep down there is a basis for kindly feeling which only needs an opportunity to bring it to the surface. I had ample opportunity to observe this change of sentiment and the growth of enthusiasm of the French for the return of the American soldier."—General John T. Pershing.

"If capital punishment reduces crime it can only accomplish this by terrorizing those who might possibly commit crime. To have this result, executions should be open, so that every one would know and realize the consequences of a criminal act."—Clarence Darrow.

THE OLD HOME TOWN

Little Old New York

NEW YORK, July 6.—A trip into Westchester county by way of the Boston and Westchester Electric railway is always an adventure. At the Forty-second street station of the Third Avenue "L" I see a brawl between two drunks, which attracts a considerable crowd. A policeman in a Ford soon arrives and disperses the gathering by the simple method of pushing both the brawlers in the face. They slink away, muttering threats and concern over "a man's rights" and the crowd soon follows.

On the elevated train I sit next to a young Cuban who is in a semi-coma. He is not drunk, but he seems under the influence of some drug. He recites poetry in Spanish by the yard. Occasionally he halts long enough to choke with laughter over something which no one else in the train is able to see. Or he beams jovially on young girls in the car and says "ello senorita." Sometimes he inquires as to the merits of the stories I am reading in my magazine.

On the Boston and Westchester, a man and woman enter and sit in the seat opposite mine. The woman is deaf and dumb, but talks continuously and very excitedly with eloquent hands. The man is bored and tries to look out the window, but she yanks his shoulder and insists that he watch her fluttering fingers. Now and again he nods wearily, as if in assent to some point she is so insistent on making. The woman never stops. I wonder why the man does not close his eyes. The poor fellow is obviously bored to death. She is still talking as they get out in New Rochelle.

On West Forty-ninth street there is a speak-easy in which hang out movie critics, stage people, and a peculiar class of neatly-dressed young men who are commonly known as maggots. Their peculiar technique is aimed at securing free drinks. They travel about the place in groups of six or eight and virtually force themselves upon people they have never seen before. They order drinks for everyone, magnanimously declaring that "these are on me." But they never wait for the check to arrive. They are off to another table, leaving the objects of their generosity to hold the bag.

An opening of a movie that attracted a large crowd was that of "The First Auto" at the Colony theater the other night. There were the usual spotlights on trucks mounted in front of the theater. There was also mounted on a truck, the famous "999," which was one of the first cars made by Henry Ford and which also was the first car to make 60 miles an hour. Barney Oldfield, who made this record, was at the theater and talked lengthily of his career. He told a great deal of his early dealings with Henry Ford, and continually referred to the latter as "Hank."

"Well, Hank," I sez, "Can you lend me 20 bucks?" "Barney, I haven't got 20 bucks," says Hank.

Oldfield told one story of a conversation that took place between Ford, himself, and a third person. The latter asked Ford if he did not think that Oldfield helped him a great deal to make him the success that he is. Ford replied that this was true; that Oldfield helped "make" him and that he helped "make" Oldfield.

Whereupon Oldfield said: "Well, Hank, if that's the case, I guess you'll admit that I made a damn sight better job of 'making' than you did."

"From pushcart to polo in two generations" is the way Edgar Selwyn expressed to me the quick progress of show and resourceful members of his race under the especially advantageous conditions of America. Many are the grandsons of pushcart peddlers who ride in smart breeches on the cinder path of Central park, play polo, and winter in Palm Beach.

But the pushcart peddlers of Allen street remain a picturesque species of the city's heterogeneous population. A pushcart man is not

SONGS of a HOUSEWIFE by Marjorie K. Rawlings

BROWSING IN THE ATTIC

(Suggested by Mildred G., Rochester, N. Y.)

BROWSING in the attic I found a Paisley shawl—The very thing I needed To decorate a wall.

I found an old umbrella, A pair of overshoes, And a forgotten raincoat I thought that I could use.

I poked around in boxes, I felt on every shelf, Unearthing countless trifles—I did enjoy myself!

Vast useless piles confront me, That I brought down today—Just twice as much as I took up And meant to put away!

FAMOUS DELAWARE TEAM WILL FACE RESERVES NEXT SUNDAY

With a record of twelve victories in thirteen starts this season, the Reserves will be put to the supreme test Sunday afternoon, the management having booked a game with the famous Delaware Baseball Club of Delaware, O.

The game will be played at Washington Park and will start at 3 o'clock.

The Delaware nine, organized in 1911, is a member of the National Commission, A. A. A., and considered one of the strongest in its class in the state.

It will be practically the first time this season the Reserves have engaged a first-class team.

Local fans, a bit downcast over the fact the Reserves have been meeting teams below their class, have not been patronizing games as well as they should.

It is apparent Xenia is represented this season by probably the strongest club in years and measures up to the class of teams playing in the K. I. O. and Central Leagues.

Not being a member of either circuit, the local management has found no end of difficulty in scheduling good teams. For that reason the attendance has fallen off considerably.

Better patronage of the local games on Sunday would enable the Reserve management to make a bigger guarantee to visiting clubs and result in the booking of stronger teams.

FIREMEN MAKE ONE RUN TO FIRE AND 29 MORE IN BALL GAME

When business interferes with pleasure-give up business, is the motto of the Xenia Fire Department.

The call of duty was answered by firemen promptly early Tuesday night just at a time when they were scheduled to begin a soft ball game with the Lang Chevrolet Co. at Cox Memorial Athletic Field.

Firemen made their first run of the day in extinguishing a small blaze on N. Detroit St. and returning to the field, made twenty-nine more runs to defeat the Chevrolet 29 to 16 in a Class B Xenia Playground League game.

The victory gave the firemen undisputed possession of first place. The game was a hotly contested affair for three innings, but in the next five frames, firemen scored twenty-one times while the opposition was being blanked by Pitcher Cope.

Losers staged a belated rally in the ninth, registering nine runs. Butchers play the Post Office Wednesday night.

Lang Chevrolet lineup: Wright, c; Berger, p; Lang, 1b; E. Howard, 2b; Weed, 3b; Pramer, ss; Robinson, cf; Cain, rf; Doak, lf.

Firemen's lineup: Baumaster, c; Cope, p; Briley, 1b; J. Haller, 2b; Buffington, 3b; Downey, ss; Dickey, cf; H. Haller, rf; Hanifan, lf; Dice, lf.

Score by innings:

RESERVES FATTEN BATTING AVERAGE AGAINST TWO TEAMS

Reserves fattened their batting averages in the week-end victories over the Springfield Eddie's Tailors and Dayton Andrews Pump team, boosting the team average seven notches to a mark of .335.

Johnson's hitting featured the double win, the Reserve left fielder raising his average exactly 100 points to a mark of .341 by smacking out seven hits.

"Jug" Conley, erstwhile Harshman second baseman, who was a regular member of the local nine last season, appeared in a Reserve uniform in both week-end contests, slugging five hits in seven legal times at bat and scoring seven runs himself.

Batting averages follow:

STARTING JUDGE TO BE BUSY DECLARES HARNESS WRITER

A. E. Staup, Tippecanoe City who has been engaged as starting judge for the three-day harness race meet at the annual Greene County Fair in August, faces a busy time of it this season, according to E. L. Churchill, sports scribe, who, in a recent article, says:

"A. E. Staup, the popular starting judge of Tippecanoe City, O., will surely be a busy man this summer and fall as he has booked some of the best fair and race meetings in the country."

"He will tap the bell for the Xenia races, August 2 to 6 his first 1927 engagement. Several of his former engagements he cannot accept owing to conflict of dates, but his book is almost full."

"Some of the dates contracted for include: Xenia, Ohio, August 3 to 6; La Porte, Ind., August 23 to 26; Bay City, Mich., August 29, to September 1; Dayton, Ohio, September 5 to 8; Eaton, Ohio, September 12 to 16; Jackson, Miss. (State fair), October 17 to 22. This will be Mr. Staup's third year at both La Porte and Eaton and his second at Jackson."

EASTWOOD FAILS TO APPEAR FOR MATCH

Eastwood Club, of Dayton, failed to put in its appearance for a scheduled Miami Valley Quoit League match with the Xenia Quoit Club on the local courts Tuesday night, disappointing a large crowd.

Local club members had not received previous word the visiting club would not appear and no explanation could be obtained.

A possibility is foreseen that the match may be forfeited.

Prevented from staging the regular match, club members held an intra-club match and Captain Wagner's team defeated Captain Devoe's team 6 to 3.

"SICK-HEADACHES?"

Torturing, maddening! Most always trace them to a lazy liver, constipation and a sour-stomach. Poison of fermented foods retained, instead of passing, is reabsorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissues, it causes congestion and that acute, sickening pain.

Blackburn's Casca-Royal Pills quickly and surely remove the cause by stimulating the liver, toning up the bowels, nerves, making the poisons move on and out, thus purifying the blood and curing the headaches. The effect is almost instantaneous.

Women, because of their sensitive organism are especially prone to periodical headaches, should not suffer if a druggist or a nearby-for Blackburn's Casca-Royal Pills have helped millions during the past 75 years. Non-secret formula, small, sweet, pleasant and "Better Than Castor Oil." Two sizes 15c-30c.

WICAL STARRING IN SALLY LEAGUE WITH CHARLOTTE OUTFIT

Sensational pitching of Thurman Wical, Greene County product, has been largely instrumental in the recent success of the Charlotte, N. C., "Hornets" in the Sally League, one of the strongest Southern baseball circuits.

Wical did not go so well early in the season but was declared to have more "stuff" on the ball than any other pitcher on the Charlotte staff, and now seems to have come into his own.

Newspaper critics cite for example that his two hurling feats during a week in the latter part of June stand out as the best mound work of the year in the league.

Among other things, he allowed but three runs in the twenty innings pitched. He hurled fifteen innings of scoreless ball, and in twenty innings against Knoxville and Asheville, gave but five bases on balls and allowed but eleven hits.

Wicals work has been highly gratifying to his team which is in second place and fighting Greenville for first position, and is overshadowing the mound work of the other members of the staff.

Wical's home is in Paintersville and he acquired his pitching experience while a member of the Bowersville Bayliffs team.

P.A. says
"Come again!"
in every puff

THERE'S a warm invitation in every cool puff on a pipe packed with P.A., if you get what I mean. You sort of look forward to each intake, the way you watch the mails for a letter from your best girl. Good old Prince Albert! Never wears out its welcome.

Why, the instant you open the tidy red tin and get a whiff of that wonderful P.A. fragrance, your mouth waters for a taste of such tobacco. Did I say "fragrant"? I hope to tell you! The flowers that bloom in the spring have nothing on Prince Albert.

And when you load-up the old jimmy-pipe and open the drafts—say, Mister! Cool as the blast of a traffic-cop's whistle. Sweet as his words: "I didn't mean you." Mild as the Gulf Stream, yet with that full, rich tobacco body that satisfies to the very limit.

I'm getting mine with a pipe and P.A. every day. I want you to get yours. All you have to do is step around the corner and tell the man-behind-the-counter you want a tin of Prince Albert. He hears that hundreds of times a day from men like yourself. Try P.A.

PRINCE ALBERT

—the national joy smoke!

P. A. is sold everywhere in 40c red tins, pound and half-pound tin tins, and pound crystal-glass humidors with sponge-moistener top. And always with every bit of bite and punch removed by the Prince Albert process.

over my veto. But it was ordered that I should pay the penalty when I came up for re-election in 1925. No effort was made during the campaign to conceal the paramount issue against me. Republican managers openly acknowledged the prospective defeat of Senators Butler, of Massachusetts, and Wadsworth, of New York. Wyoming voters were told that Republican control of the next senate would hang by so slender a thread that it was necessary for Wyoming to assure continued party supremacy in that body. The overthrow of the Democratic state administration was therefore depicted as an urgent national party necessity. In order that if Senator Warren should disappear from the scene, a Republican would be named to succeed him. I failed of re-election by 1,300 votes in a total poll of some 68,000."

Tells Dangers Of Gall Stones Hepatic Torpidity

Victims of Gall Bladder Trouble, Inactive Liver and Bowels Should Watch These Danger Signs

Dizziness, headache, shortness of breath, distress after eating, gas in stomach and bowels, pressure or sharp pains in right side that often shoot through to the back, coated tongue, bad breath, lack of ambition, weakness, nervousness and nights of restless misery caused by bad dreams or inability to sleep.

These are symptoms of poisonous waste matter in the system (often called auto-intoxication) indicating improper bowel action, hepatic torpidity or gall bladder trouble—and when they come to folks in middle life they should be checked at once, before the dangers of more serious ailments like gall stones and high blood pressure are developed.

In the opinion of the writer, one of the best things in the world, for conditions of this kind is the inexpensive home use of "Klax-Ko" Tablets, which Sayre's Drug Store or any other good drugstore supply on a binding guarantee to refund their cost, if easily noticeable beneficial results are not obtained inside of a week! Don't wait until your entire system is polluted with poisonous waste or until gall bladder inflammation or gall stones makes a dangerous operation necessary, but start the use of "Klax-Ko" Tablets today. Its use will not cost you a penny. —Adv.

our power," she tells them, "to speak a new language in politics. We have an opportunity to house clean public life. It is particularly incumbent upon us to use our great voting strength to keep dishonest men out of high official places. We should specialize in thwarting the illicit use of money in primaries and elections. Wyoming is a state with an area larger than that of all New England and most of Ohio combined. My recent campaign cost barely $10,000, despite the immensity of the field. Expenditure of money on the scale revealed in several states can only take place under corrupt circumstances."

From the moment she took office at Cheyenne on January 1, 1925, Mrs. Ross was faced by an overwhelmingly hostile Republican legislature. Forthwith, she asserted, a systematic drive was launched with the object of depriving the governor of authority and prerogatives never before challenged or curtailed. "First," Mrs. Ross explains, "they introduced legislation to take the supervision of banking in Wyoming away from the state administration and turn it over to a commission of hand-picked bankers. By laboring with leaders of both parties, I managed to sidetrack the proposed bill before I had a chance to veto them. Soon afterward came the attempt to kill the governor's right to fill a vacancy in the United States senatorship."

"These specific attacks on the gubernatorial sovereignty were more or less incessant. They seemed to spring from a desire to hamper a woman governor. Ever and anon some new method was devised of confronting that woman governor with perplexities. I met conditions as they came along in a spirit of determination to do two things—first, to see that the rights of the governorship, as I found them, should be handed over to my successor unimpaired; and, secondly, to do nothing that would reflect upon the ability of a woman to administer the state's affairs capably and honestly. I found that a character of rock was constantly required to meet recurring emergencies. But I also learned that the strict letter of the law was an unfailing source of refuge. To it I decided resolutely to cling."

Mrs. Ross, who is appearing on the circuit of the Swarthmore Chautauque under the direction of Dr. Paul M. Pearson, will spend the entire summer on its tented platform. She will visit Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Vermont, New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, speaking nightly. Mrs. Ross stresses one point emphatically to her audiences. "While the Republicans of Wyoming," she states, "fought me tooth and nail as politicians and partisans, they never forgot that they are gentlemen or that I am a woman. Their enmity was fierce, but always friendly."

The Rovin' Ritzies

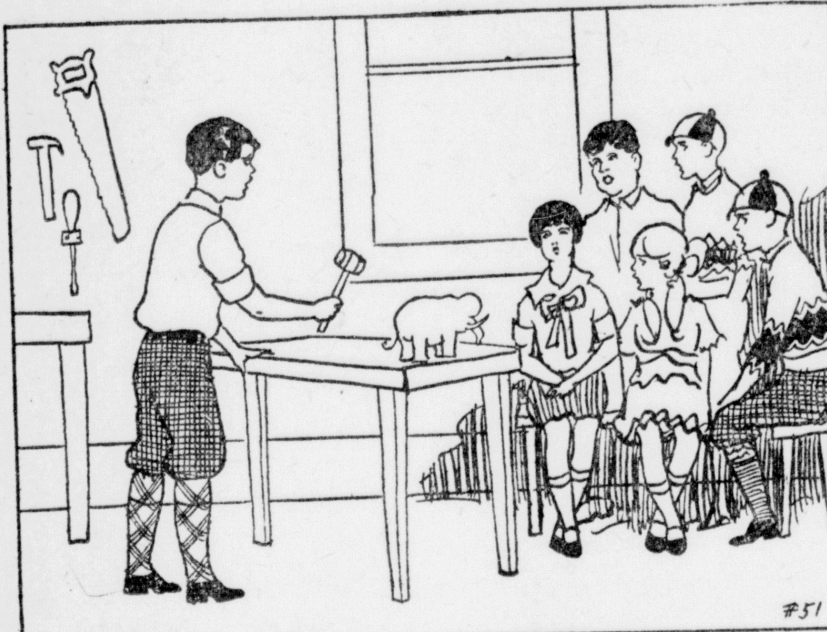

By Flo Frederick

That Bill should hold the money bag is suggested by fellow Ritzie, Tag. The Ritzie club was making money. It hardly seemed possible to the six club members that their little organization should have worked out so well in such a short time. They scarcely knew just how or why it had gotten started, but once under way, each Ritzie had taken such an interest in the club activities that their parties and stunts and things couldn't help but be a success.

This last club enterprise—the raising of minnows for sale—had been their first money-making stunt. Already it had brought them $3.55, which to the six club members seemed like an enormous sum. It was because of this large amount of money that had suddenly come into their hands that they had called a meeting.

President Marty was addressing his fellow club members. By his side on a three-legged stool stood the elephant bank which contained the nickels, dimes and quarters that made up the Ritzie club fund.

"Fellow Ritzies," he boomed out in his deepest voice, "we are meeting today to appoint a treasurer who will take care of and be responsible for the money made by our club."

"What he should lose it?" asked Bill, the newest Ritzie.

Marty hammered loudly on the carpenter shop bench with his hammer. "Address me as Mr. Speaker. Don't you realize that this is an important meeting of the Ritzies?"

As this was the first meeting that Bill had attended since his invitation, he became quite awed at Marty's commanding voice. He didn't know that it was Marty's hobby to have the Ritzie meetings as near like the lodge meetings of his father as it was possible to do. All of this formality seemed quite terrifying to him.

"Do I hear a nomination for treasurer?" continued the president.

"Mr. Speaker," addressed Tag, rising stiffly from his chair, "as all the rest of us have club of

ENGINEER CLAIMS TOWN CAN FINANCE WATER DEPARTMENT

A bond issue of $52,000 in either general indebtedness or general mortgage bonds, and an assessment against property of $42,000 would provide a water supply in operation for Yellow Springs, furnishing water for domestic purposes to practically every home in the village, and fire protection for every building.

These statements were made by E. A. Lawrence, representative of the Jennings-Lawrence engineering firm, Columbus, in addressing a joint meeting of the village council and the waterworks committee of the town's Civic Club at Yellow Springs Tuesday night.

Representing his firm, Lawrence is making a preliminary survey and estimate of the village for a possible waterworks plant. He declared that the rock underground would necessitate blasting in only one small section of the village, thus clearing away one previous objection to the waterworks.

The meeting was adjourned and a public mass meeting called for Thursday night in the council chamber. All interested citizens of the village are invited to attend Thursday's meeting and the discussion at that time will determine the council's future course on the subject. Mr. Lawrence will also be present to answer questions regarding the survey he is making.

EXPLODING PISTOL HURTS CELEBRATOR

John T. Harbine, Jr., Wilming-ton Pike, lawyer and loan agent, is nursing an injured finger on the right hand a reminder of a Fourth of July accident.

Harbine was having target practice at his home with a .41 caliber Colt revolver when the cylinder exploded, a piece of the metal piercing the end of his trigger finger and exposing the bone.

He thinks it probable a fragment entered the bone, but an examination by Dr. R. R. McClellan, who administered first aid, disclosed he had sustained no powder burns.

Harbine had fired less than a dozen shots when the accident occurred.

It was the lone "Gloufous Fourth" accident reported.

SHED DESTROYED BY FIRE TUESDAY

A firecracker, carelessly tossed by a belated Fourth of July celebrator is thought possibly to have caused a fire which destroyed a shed in the rear of the home of Wilbur Wilson, 630 N. Detroit St.

at 6 p. m. Tuesday. The property is owned by Mrs. Rowena Zartman. Damage is estimated at about $70. A lawn mower was the most valuable article burned. The shed burned to the ground. It was well ablaze when firemen arrived.

Clear, White, Smooth Hands Are Beautiful

Manicuring alone can not make the hands beautiful. The skin itself must be soft, firm, white, and youthful. The easiest way to do this is to mix the juice of two lemons with three ounces of Orchard White, and massage this sweetly fragrant lemon bleach daily into the hands and arms. It will make even stained, worn hands soft, clear, smooth and white.

My Son's Sweethearts by IDA MCGLONE GIBSON

"Natee, darling, would you—can you love such an unworthy person as I?"

WHAT HAS HAPPENED:

Philip Wynne Tracy IV has had a childish engagement with Natee Jones. Becoming interested in Natee herself and a wealthy Frenchman, he finds himself falling in love with her. Natee, overhearing him making love to Natee, breaks her engagement.

America enters the World War and Phil is one of the first to enlist. Just before leaving for France he meets Natee again and they plan to be married. The immediate departure of the troops, however, prevents this. The regiment is ordered to France and Phil is wounded and decorated for bravery.

After the armistice, Phil comes face to face with his mother, who has come to France to hunt for him. She is accompanied by Major Aukland, who is devoted to her. Mrs. Tracy learns with dismay that Phil intends to marry Pat, a rich French divorcee. Phil compromises with his mother. If she will refuse Major Aukland's proposal of marriage, he will give up Pat for two years. They return to America.

Mrs. Tracy invites Natee to her home. Natee seems cold and distant and Phil is then convinced that she is interested in Jerry Kenyon, her father's young business partner.

About this time Phil receives a letter from Pat telling him that a marriage has been arranged between herself and a wealthy Frenchman. Sick at heart, Phil's thoughts turn to Natee and he goes to her. Fearing for Phil's future at their unhalloved love continues. Natee sends him away from her with a lie. Disillusioned, Phil realizes his only chance of happiness is with Natee if he can but win her again. He drives madly all night in his haste to get to her. He finds Natee at her old home leaning against the old trusting tree.

Here the story further unfolds.

CHAPTER LIX A NEW GENERATION IS BEGINNING

PHILIP TRACY stopped the car beside the old elm tree.

"Natee," he said, "I spoke her name. She turned her head and looked vacantly at him.

"Natee," he said, "I have come for you." He got out and opened the door of his car.

"My own car will be here in a minute," she said.

In an instant he was beside her. "Natee, why do I find you so early in the morning at our tree?"

"It is not 'our' tree," Philip Tracy. He noted with despair that she called him "Philip." "It is Rod's tree, hallowed by all the times he tried to comfort me. The last time I really saw him was here the night before he went away forever, and I had nothing better to give him than than to tell him I was glad he was going because I knew he would take care of it. It is so horrible. Even at the time he had made his last gesture of love for me and for you; both of us unworthy."

"What are you talking about, Natee?" asked Philip, who had not understood anything she was saying. "Don't you know? Were you not notified?"

"No, I was away from the house all day yesterday. Come, get in the car and tell me all about it."

AFTER a slight hesitation, Natee Jones entered the blue roadster that had kept on all through this long night's ride.

With the feel of her next to him, he got back all he had been longing for; all he had never found since that night when they took their first ride in the other blue roadster.

"Natee, sweetheart, now that I've got you again, I'll never let you go." The girl peeped around his arm up into his face. "I promised Jerry Kenyon last night that I would tell him today whether I would be his wife or not."

"How does he look with two front teeth out?" Phil's voice was triumphant. He had arrived in time!

Natee laughed. It was the same old incorrigible Wynne; the one she had lost the night of the party.

"Wynne, you are a brute. The sight of his disfigured face was what made me let him think that maybe at last I would say 'yes.' But you are not driving me toward my place."

"I know it."

"Where are you going?"

"I don't hardly know myself, Natee. It will depend upon you."

"Wynne Tracy, when did anything that you wanted to do depend upon me?"

Philip turned a radiant face toward her. She had called him by the old love name again. She had called him "Wynne." He would tell her now. He would put it to the test!

"Since the time you and I used to ride on the front seats of your father's milk wagon," he answered.

Phil felt Natee come even a little closer to him.

"Darling, I am taking you into some outside town where we will find a judge or a minister, and be married."

"Are you crazy, Wynne?"

"No, I think I have just become sane."

"I love you, Natee; have always loved you and always will love you. I was not thoroughly conscious of this until last night, and then my only ambition was to get to you as quickly as possible and tell you so. I was a great way from you, both in body and spirit, when I found this wonderful thing out, and I have driven all night, hoping, praying, that I might not be too late."

"Natee, darling, do you—can you love such a foolish, unworthy person as I? If you can't, the world will be a living hell to me. I know you deserve some better man, and I think I could have given you up to Rod, if you had told me you loved him, but I can't think you love Jerry Kenyon, and I'm going to take you away from him."

"I am going to keep you forever more, just for myself, for without you, sweetheart, I would be lost to everything."

NATEE had said nothing, but her face had become as bright as the morning, as she snuggled further into the embrace of Phil's arm.

"What will your mother say, Wynne?" she asked after a long silence.

"She can say nothing, but I think she will be glad. Natee, do you know that now, for the first time since I came home, I feel that there is something in the future for me. We will do great things together, dear. I wish old Rod was here."

"He is here, Phil. I told you the truth at the tree. I was keeping a trust with him there this morning. Do you know that before Rod went to France he made his will and left everything he had in the world to you and me—my two truest and best friends, whom I hope will in time become one, said the will, which I read yesterday, and which you would have done had you been here. Strange we should have gotten this message from him just at this time."

"When I got home from the attorney's office, Dad called me over to his house and told me Jerry's version of the fight. Jerry came later,

Does your daughter attend school regularly?

MANY GIRLS are absent from school for a few days each month because of illness. In many cases this is unnecessary because young girls—as well as older women—can be strengthened by Lydia E. The following testimonials show what the Compound has done for other schoolgirls.

NERVOUS AND DIZZY

Charleston, Illinois:—"I gave my fifteen-year-old girl Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it did her a wonderful lot of good. She was nervous, weak and dizzy. At last she was so good off that she was out of school for four months. The Vegetable Compound has improved her in every way and she has gone back to school. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to other mothers with girls who are not as strong as they should be." Mrs. Alice Louthan, Route 2, Charleston, Illinois.

SICK AND WEAK

Camden, New Jersey:—"When my daughter was twelve years old she was hurt at the play-ground. She was sick and weak for some time after that and was not able to go to school regularly. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped her wonderfully, and she now goes to school every day. She has gained in weight and has a better appetite than she had before taking it." LIBERIA PAYS OFF WAR DEBTS IN FULL

LITTLE REPUBLIC MAKES SETTLEMENT WITH $35,600 CHECK

No Concessions Asked
By Nation When
Debt Is Paid

WASHINGTON, July 6.—For the first time in the hectic history of American war debt negotiations, a nation came to the United States treasury today and tendered a check for its entire obligations, plus interest.

The Republic of Liberia, with a population of but 4,000,000, mostly negroes, presented to Acting Secretary of the Treasury Mills a check for approximately $35,600 in settlement of its entire obligations to the United States.

Liberia obtained advances of $26,000 from the United States under the Liberty Loan Act. On this amount something over $9,000 interest was due at the time of the settlement.

A letter from Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, congratulating the tiny republic on its accomplishment, was made public by Acting Secretary Mills. It was pointed out at the treasury that the Liberian settlement was relatively as great a burden upon that nation as that of the funding of the huge war debts of the British and French.

No concessions on interest rates or principal were demanded—simply a check representing the entire obligation was presented.

Back of the settlement lies a rubber concession by the Liberian government to Harvey Firestone, tire manufacturer, who has been among the first producers in America to take definite steps to break the British rubber monopoly in the far east.

Last fall Firestone obtained the right to an old British rubber plantation of about 900 acres and in addition 1,000,000 acres of undeveloped rubber land in Liberia. The combined plantation is said to be the largest in the world outside of the far east.

According to a statement issued today by the Firestone interests the plantation represents an investment of $100,000,000.

At the present time the corporation employs about 12,000 men in Liberia. It was stated that eventually this force will be increased to 300,000, representing about one-thirteenth of the entire population.

As a result of the Firestone development the Liberian government recently floated a $5,000,000 loan in New York, the proceeds of which were partially used to pay off outstanding obligations.

Representatives of the Firestone corporation said that the potential production of the Liberian tract would be approximately 300,000,000 pounds annually or the equivalent of 60,000,000 automobile tires a year.

The American consumption of rubber in 1927 is now estimated at about $50,000,000 pounds. The manufacturers of United States use more rubber than any other nation but are chiefly dependent upon the British monopoly for their supply of the raw material.

While some rubber is being shipped from the section of the Firestone plantation on the old British concession, heavy production will not be possible for about five years according to the statement.

LIBRARY JANITOR NOT UNDER CIVIL SERVICE IS RULED

COLUMBUS, O., July 6.—The janitor of a library building of a county library district is not within the civil service classification of state, county or city school district employees, and may be dismissed at the will of the board of library district trustees of such district, without the necessity of charges being filed.

This ruling was given to the state civil service commission by Attorney General Turner, who was informed that the commission had received a request for an opinion on the subject from Prosecuting Attorney Marshall, Greene County.

Prosecutor Marshall, the commission told Turner, wrote the commission, in part as follows: "The Xenia Library Association, which is organized under the laws of Ohio as a corporation not for profit, but for library purposes only, after operating several years, became short of funds and, in 1913 made an agreement with the county commissioners whereby the commissioners were to make a levy for the maintenance of the library and the trustees of the association made a conveyance of the real estate and, also, the personal property, including books, to the commissioners in trust for library purposes.

"However, the janitor was not under civil service until, probably eighteen months, or two years, ago. This janitor has not been satisfactory and charges of incompetency can be established."

FIVE MORE ACCUSED IN GEORGIA BEATING CASE BY GRAND JURY

Indictments Are Found
Against Men In Whipping Case

TOCCOA, Ga., July 6.—Another chapter in its investigation of recent activities of hooded and robed doggers in this county was written by the Stephens County grand jury here, when it returned seven indictments against five men, charging them with having administered a whipping to Barto Singleton, farmer, March 11.

Ten indictments against five men were returned yesterday in connection with the flogging of Mrs. Ansley Bowers and her fifteen-year-old son, June 11.—Two other cases in which women were victims of bands of doggers are to be investigated later.

W. G. Acree, principal of the county high school at Eastonville, who was one of those accused in the case of Mrs. Bowers and her son, also was indicted in connection with the attack on Singleton. With him, in two joint indictments charging attack with intent to murder and riot and separate bills charging pistol-carrying were named "Jim" Adderhold, Moses Jordan and Hendrix Wiley, farmers, and Barton Lowry, factory worker.

Singleton, who previously had sworn out warrants for the men, accusing them of having participated in the attack on him, told authorities he was taken from his home at night by a band of hooded men wearing white robes and severely flogged with a leather strap after being charged by his assailants with bootlegging.

Each of the five men previously had been arrested in connection with the Singleton case and are at liberty under bonds of $300. New warrants were issued for them following the grand jury action and their arrest is expected soon.

DIVORCEE DYING, LOVER KILLS SELF

BELLEFONTAINE, O., July 6.—Mrs. Rose Pickering, 35, a divorcee, was reported near death in a hospital here today, with a bullet wound through her body, and John Christian, a rejected suitor, was dead, as the result of a shooting at the woman's home last night.

Christian came to the house and shot the woman, after she had called police earlier in the evening, complaining that he was annoying her. He then turned the gun upon himself and died instantly. Six children survive Mrs. Pickering.

ATLANTIC CITY HIT BY FIRE; $225,000 DAMAGE REPORTED

Six Hotels Among Buildings Burned As Guests
Flee

ATLANTIC CITY, July 6.—Six hotels on Arkansas Ave., eight amusement resorts on the boardwalk between Arkansas Ave. and Missouri Ave., an exhibit building and a bath house were destroyed last night by a fire of enormous damage is estimated at $225,000.

The hotels, frame structures three and four stories in height, were the Larchmont, Armstrong, Prescott, Leonard, Lutz and Regent. A brisk southwest breeze, which assisted the firemen to keep the flames from the $1,000,000 pier across the boardwalk, the Columbia Hotel and other large structures adjacent, drove the fire through the buildings on Arkansas Ave., with such velocity that many of those in the hotels had no time to save their belongings.

Six hundred persons in all were routed from the buildings as one after another burst into flames. The fire enveloped the exhibit of the Remington Arms Company, in a building at the boardwalk and Missouri Ave., and the building, in which 20,000 cartridges were stored caught fire. The crowd which had surged out upon the smoldering boardwalk despite the efforts of the police, withdrew hastily as the cartridges began to explode.

Firemen and policemen rushed into the burning building and carried out the packing cases containing the ammunition. Although many shells were detonated, all those still in the packing cases were taken out.

In the burned area, near the hotels on Arkansas Ave., was a parking place for motor cars, which was well filled at the time. All but one of the cars was saved. Young's Baths, an old bathhouse in this neighborhood, burned.

Eight large brick buildings in the block in which the fire spread withstood the flames. One of them, at the boardwalk and Arkansas Ave., housed an incubator babe exhibit, with forty-one infants, under the glass sides. Spectators, including women who came from the Hotel Shelburn, rushed into the building and carried out the babes.

Patrolman Thomas Hutchinson was appealed to by a frantic woman, who said her little girl still was in the burning building. The policeman ran into the structure and searched for the child for several minutes. He retired only when the floor began to sag beneath his feet, stumbling in the smoke, fell down a flight of stairs. He was injured seriously and was taken to City Hospital.

The building collapsed in a few minutes after he had left it. The child found later in another hotel, which was not reached by the fire, was restored by her mother.

LABORATORY FEES OF SCHOOL UPHELD BY TURNER OPINION

COLUMBUS, O., July 6.—"In view of the fact that laboratory fees have been exacted by school authorities for many years without question, I am of the opinion that a board of education may, in its discretion, prescribe rules regarding pupils in the public schools to pay reasonable incidental fees to cover the use of material and the breakage of test tubes, etc., used in laboratory work." Attorney General Edward C. Turner held in an opinion given to the officials of the state bureau of inspection and supervision of public schools.

"Such rules must be reasonable and not such as to exact tuition fees under the guise of mere incidental fees," Turner continued. "No charge, however, can be made for the use of apparatus owned, or used, by the board of education."

Turner held that in the enforcement of such rules, consideration must be given to provisions of Ohio laws which, in effect, require school authorities to furnish textbooks and other personal necessities, including medical care and such other relief as may be necessary to extend to children who are unable to attend school by reason of the inability of their parents, or guardians, to furnish the same for them.

WILE SAYS:

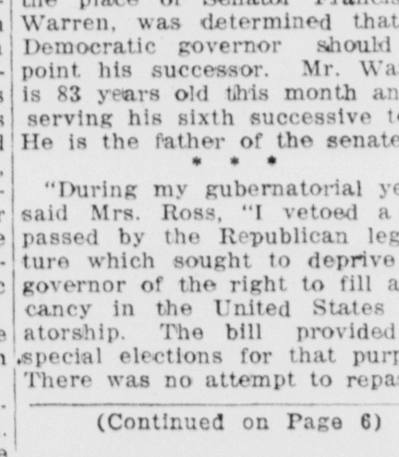

Governor Nellie
Tells Of Defeat
Fighting the G. O. P.
Friendly Enemies

By FREDERIC WILLIAM WILE
Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright 1927

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Nellie Taylor Ross, of Wyoming, first woman to be elected governor of an American state, is now narrating on the Chautauqua platform hitherto unknown details of her brief political career. Speaking this week in Maryland and Virginia towns near Washington, Mrs. Ross charged the Republican party acting through its national organization, with bringing about her defeat for re-election last year. The former Wyoming executive declared that the G. O. P., fearing it might become necessary during 1927 or 1928 to fill the place of Senator Francis E. Warren, was determined that no Democratic governor should appoint his successor. Mr. Warren is 83 years old this month and is serving his sixth successive term. He is the father of the senate.

"During my gubernatorial year," said Mrs. Ross, "I vetoed a bill passed by the Republican legislature which sought to deprive the governor of the right to fill a vacancy in the United States senate. The bill provided for special elections for that purpose. There was no attempt to repeal it."

COMMANDER IS MADE MEMBER OF LEGION OF HONOR IN PARIS

Honor Higher Than Given
Lindbergh By
Government

PARIS, July 6.—In the name of the French government, Premier Poincare today decorated Commander Richard E. Byrd as an officer in the Legion of Honor.

The premier congratulated Byrd and his three co-flyers on their flight from New York to Ver-Sur-Mer, France, terming it one of the crowning achievements of the age.

Sheldon Whitehouse, United States Charge D'Affaires, was among those present when Poincare bestowed the coveted honor on Byrd.

Byrd, his pilot, Bert Acosta, G. O. Noville and Bernt Balchen, visited the premier shortly after breakfast. Their stay with the premier, who is far behind on his official duties, was brief.

The medal was pinned on Byrd at 9:30 a. m. Byrd's decoration is a grade higher than that given Charles A. Lindbergh, New York to Paris flyer, because it was explained, Byrd is a naval officer, older than Lindbergh, and already is the wearer of several high decorations.

In decorating Byrd, Poincare gave the commander the usual kiss on both cheeks.

Balchen told International News Service that there is no truth in the report that he is planning a flight from New York to Oslo, Norway, next year. Oslo is Balchen's home and his aged mother now lives there.

"I never thought of such a thing," said Balchen.

GIRL DANGLES FROM PLANE IN MID-AIR; NARROWLY ESCAPES

Succeeds In Second Parachute Leap From
Airplane

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., July 6.—Dangling at the end of a rope 2,000 feet in the air for a half hour, Miss Evelyn Barrett, 19-year-old Minneapolis girl, narrowly escaped death when the pilot of an airplane from which she attempted a parachute jump, landed his plane in a plowed field.

Uninjured and undaunted by her narrow escape, Miss Barrett, a telephone operator, demanded that she be permitted to try again. Her second attempt was successful.

Employed to entertain a crowd of 3,000 at a country Fourth of July program, Miss Barrett climbed out on the wing of the plane as it soared 2,000 feet and swung off. But the rope holding her parachute to the wing strut had been tied in a slip knot and her efforts to loosen it tightened its grip.

"When she didn't jump at my signal I knew there was something wrong," said R. D. Ellis, pilot of the plane, "and I doubled back on my course. She didn't jump the next time either, but just swung back and forth."

Another pilot on the ground took off and attempted to fly underneath Ellis's plane and rescue Miss Barrett, but the wind was too "bumpy" and he finally was forced to land.

Finally, his gasoline running low, Ellis headed for a plowed field a mile away, where he made a safe landing in the soft dirt.

STEPHENSON TELLS STORY OF INDIANA POLITICS AT PRISON

Prosecutor Gets Information That May Involve
"Every Politician In The State"—May Involve Governor.

MICHIGAN, CITY, Ind., July 6.—David C. Stephenson, former Klan leader and political boss in Indiana, has made good his threat to tell what he knows about Indiana politics and politicians.

For four hours he told his story to William H. Remy, prosecutor of Marion County, and three of Remy's assistants, here in the state prison, where Stephenson is serving a life sentence for the murder of Madge Oberholzer.

What he told Remy and his associates still is the secret of Stephenson and the prosecutors.

But Stephenson's readiness to talk was apparent as soon as he met his interviewers in the prisoner's interview room adjoining the warden's office.

OFFICERS CHARGED WITH VIOLATION OF VILLAGE SPEED LAW

Coroner Chambliss And Deputy Sheriff Face Accusations

Dr. F. M. Chambliss, coroner and Kenneth C. Barr, county road patrolman, were expected to appear before Mayor F. W. Ogan, James town, Wednesday, to answer to warrants charging them with speeding.

The warrants were sworn out by Al Zelner, marshal, and charge violation of a village ordinance regulating traffic on congested streets. The ordinance is designed to regulate "unnecessary fast driving," but does not fix a speed limit.

The charges are said to be based on the claim that both Barr and Dr. Chambliss drove unnecessarily fast through Jamestown streets Saturday on their way to investigate an automobile accident east of that town, sometime after the accident happened.

Before going to Jamestown to answer the charges, Coroner Chambliss said he was hurrying to the accident scene to procure pictures to be used in an inquiry into the accident. He said Barr had been instructed to hurry to the scene to prevent removal of the automobiles involved in the accident.

FOUR MEN DROWNED WHEN PLANE FALLS INTO LAKE NEAR SEATTLE

SEATTLE, Wash., July 6.—Four men, all believed to be residents of California, drowned here when an airplane in which they were passengers fell 1,000 feet into Lake Washington.

Three of the bodies have been recovered by the Seattle Harbor.

WILL INVESTIGATE CHARGES OF UNFAIR METHOD BY RAIDERS

Complaints Filed By
Council Say Accused
Falsely Held

DAYTON, O., July 6.—Preparations for a thorough investigation into all phases of the raids conducted here by federal dry enforcement officers Saturday night, Sunday and Monday were being made today.

Federal Judge Benson W. Hough announced that the investigation would be conducted and that all evidence of irregularities by the raiding of officials would be submitted to the federal prohibition department at Washington, D. C.

Decision to conduct the probe was made after complaint had been filed with Judge Hough by Attorney Irving Delscamp, of this city, who charged that many Dayton men and women were improperly arrested, spirited to jails outside of Dayton and held 16 hours, or more, without opportunity to consult with counsel. Delscamp stated that no charges were filed against some of the prisoners and that a number of them were held in prison 15 hours.

Judge Hough directed attention to the fact that federal prisoners cannot legally be held more than 48 hours without a charge being filed against them.

Circumstances surrounding the issuance of warrants in connection with the raids may, also, be probed, it was indicated. At least one local official of the Ohio Anti-Saloon League may be involved in the proposed investigation, it was stated. Alleged information, gathered by Anti-Saloon League authorities, was turned over to federal dry officials prior to the raids, it was claimed.

Counsel for persons arrested by the raids claimed that this alleged information together with private purchases of liquor by "under-cover" agents for prohibition enforcement authorities, did not legalize the arrests.

CLEVELAND NEEDS MORE POLICEWOMEN

CLEVELAND, O., July 6.—Cleveland needs more policewomen. Captain Dorothy Dean Henry, head of the women's bureau made this statement before a luncheon of the Associated club here, saying that the present number of policewomen in Cleveland was insufficient to cope with prevention of present day delinquencies—the most important work of the women's bureau.

"We have now fifteen policewomen," said Captain Henry, "but all of our time is taken up with emergency calls. We have no time to do any patrol work which is very necessary in prevention of delinquencies."

"All but three or four of the 220 girls we are asked to find last year are still missing," Captain Henry declared. "Girls usually leave home because of a feeling of independence, combined with unsatisfactory home conditions. In some cases they run away to be married."

His body will be sent to Dayton today for burial.

BIBLE THOUGHT

THE HOPE OF YOUTH.—For thou art my hope, O Lord God thou art my trust from my youth, Psalm 71:5.

DRAMATIC ACHIEVEMENT

"In another year, American companies will be covering more mileage than all the rest of the world put together," predicts Charles L. Lawrence, President of the Wright Aeronautical Corporation. Mr. Lawrence, perfecter of the famous Wright whirlwind engine with which both the America and the Spirit of St. Louis are equipped, believes that Lindbergh could easily have extended his flight for the 4,500 mile trip to Rome. He is quoted as saying, "Chamberlin and Levine actually traveled more than 4,100 miles without a stop. Within a couple of years engines will be produced which will be able to go 6,000 miles without a stop. The longer mileage, in my opinion, will be made possible by building greater fuel economy into engines, and by constructing planes which will have a larger carrying capacity per horse power."

He continues, "The Lindbergh and Chamberlin achievements will help American airplane builders to get into foreign markets, including Europe, which until the flights lacked confidence in the products of distant manufacturers, preferring planes and motors made nearer home. The most immediate result will be to help us sell motors and planes to South American governments and private enterprises. Our company was already doing some business in South America, but these dramatic achievements will clinch the argument concerning the superiority of American products."

"Lindbergh dramatized the new status of aviation, and made an impression on the popular mind which is infinitely more effective than endless statistics concerning the relative safety of aviation. It will have far-reaching business results. It will help to break down resistance on the part of those who are asked to finance the establishment of new air routes."

HIDDEN TALENTS

You may be a failure because you are not aware of your own ability. Doubtless, a mule has no idea how hard he can kick until somebody tusses him up a bit.

Once there was a woman who suddenly became a widow of sorts because of the sudden departure of her husband for unknown parts. He had become dyspeptic and fatigued of living with her because of her bad cooking.

Thrown helpless upon a pretty fair kind of world, she turned for assistance to only thing she knew about, which was cooking, and made so great a success of her talent powers that she was forced to give herself a French name. Circumstances had developed her talent. If she only had known that she possessed it, she might now have a husband who would dole out to her $10 a week for household expenses, instead of being a poor, weak woman who scarcely has strength enough to carry her cash receipts to the bank each afternoon.

The moral in this is that a valuable gift may be encased in brown wrapping paper.

The Way of the World

By GROVE PATTERSON

GIVING AT THE RIGHT TIME

Nathan Straus, New York, great giver to good causes, quotes this maxim: "What you give in health is gold; what you give in sickness is silver; what you give after death is lead."

One who can afford to give has a right to the pleasure which comes with generosity. He has the advantage of being able to see that his money is spent as he would have it spent. Giving, in health, is the happiest giving of all.

IT ALL DEPENDS

What is wealth? You have millions but don't realize it. A multi-millionaire, stranded in the midst of a wide desert, would barter all his riches for a drink of water. The poorest American laborer, with a bit of a home too come to at night, is rich compared with a Chinese coolie.

Some day the rays of the sun may run dynamos to heat and energize the world. What, then, becomes of the coal owners? Wealth is comparative. It depends on environment. Americans, adding up what they have, find they know little of material poverty.

Real poverty is poverty of appreciation, poverty of imagination, poverty of the soul.

BROWSING in the attic
I found a Paisley shawl—
The very thing I needed
To decorate a wall.

I found an old umbrella,
A pair of overshoes,
And a forgotten raincoat
I thought that I could use.

I poked around in boxes,
I felt on every shelf,
Unearthing countless trifles—
I did enjoy myself!

Vast useless piles confront me,
That I brought down today—
Just twice as much as I took up
And meant to put away!

KELLYGRAMS by FRED C. KELLY

PROBLEMS IN TALK

Ordinary talk is probably more of a problem than people generally suspect.

A committee of the National Council of Teachers of English, headed by my old friend, John M. Clapp, have been trying to learn just how important English is in everyday life.

They have put questions to men and women in various occupations about the difficulty of finding the right phrases in which to say what one may wish to say.

Replies to such questions indicate that most people face a troublesome problem whenever they try to express themselves.

Being able to use good grammar isn't enough. Those who speak faultless grammar are often the least sure of themselves when they try to carry on a conversation. The trick is to hit upon the right words for the use at hand.

Here are a few of the difficulties mentioned by various people:

"To be concise without being abrupt. Brevity is often mistaken for rudeness and bores hostility."

"I find myself using cold phrases I have always used, and feel I need fresh new words for each conversation."

"It's hard for me to phrase questions to bring out the desired information."

"Giving a report to a superior is a nervous strain. I elaborate too many unimportant details."

"Oral instructions to a servant are equally misunderstood."

"I can get acquainted with people quickly, but then do not always know what to say next."

"I cannot formulate my thoughts into words quickly enough to contribute to general conversation."

"It's hard to keep to the point."

"I use too many words to cover the ground."

"I never know what to say to girls."

Few of us are like Calvin Coolidge and say nothing.

We talk enough to have plenty of practice.

Yet we don't learn.

We keep right on using the wrong tools.

CLEVELAND, O.—The tougher they come, the better "Judge" George McKay likes it. McKay, convicted of embezzlement, was chosen judge of the "kangaroo court" established at the county jail by his fellow prisoners to preserve order in their ranks. Splitting on the floor, profane language, and loud arguments are the offenses of which the prisoners with more tender susceptibilities complained. "Bootleggers are the worst offenders," McKay said. Diet and Health

By Lulu Hunt Peters M.D.

Author of "Diet and Health" and "Diet for Children"

A WHOLE MEAL

I don't know how true it is, but I have heard that Chop Suey, that very popular dish served in Chinese restaurants, is not known in China; that it originated in San Francisco. At any rate, the Chinese are certainly enterprising to concoct it for us here. It is a good wholesome dish, and apparently is one of the favorites of the F. F. F.'s (Friendly Fat Fraternity), for I have had more queries as to its caloric value than for any other single food.

While I was at Battle Creek recently, Chop Suey was one of the frequent dishes made in the cooking school, and I will give you their recipe. I made it myself once. (And sampled it every time it was made—I love it!)

Their recipe, of course, is a vegetarian one, and if you prefer to use lean meat instead of the vegetarian "meat" or protose they use, the caloric value would not be changed much—probably a few calories less, for the protose is made with nuts. (Dear Dr. Kellogg would say it was utterly spoiled by the change. Perhaps 'twould be for some; many are improved by going on a vegetarian diet.)

Chop Suey

Mix the following:

One-half pound protose, browned in one-half inch cubes.

Four medium onions, sliced.

Twelve stalks celery, one-inch cubes.

One can mushrooms.

Then add the following Brown Sauce:

Five tablespoons of butter.

Four teaspoons of Savita (or Vegex).

Two tablespoons molasses.

Six level tablespoons flour.

One and one-half cups hot water.

Two cups strained tomatoes.

Melt butter, add flour, pour in hot water and then other ingredients and stir until thickened. Pour this sauce over the first mixture and cook for one and one-half hours in a slow oven.

Remove from fire and add two cups of canned soy beans seed sprouts and fourteen water chestnuts thinly sliced, and reheat. This recipe is very large—about fifteen to twenty servings.

You see, with all the vegetables and the Savita (a yeast extract, very high in vitamin B) and the nourishing protose, this is a very wholesome dish, and it sure is good.

A serving of four and one-half ounces counts approximately 100 C. (22 protein, 45 fat, 33 carbohydrate). Not so high, is it? You'll want twice that amount.

You should serve plain boiled rice with Chop Suey. Rice, one-half cup, counts 100 C.

A dish of this sort is what we can call a one-piece meal, and you don't need anything but the rice and a fresh fruit or vegetable salad to complete the main part of the meal.

(The canned sprouts and canned water chestnuts are imported, but you should be able to get them at any large grocery store.)

I think this recipe is more delicious than any of the chop sueys I've eaten at the Chinese restaurants. I don't know what the sauce is that is used in the restaurants, but if you're reducing, I suggest you count it about 25 C. a tablespoonful. If you're underweight, why don't you eat it all! (The chances are, if you're underweight, you don't care much for dishes with so much savor to them. That's one of your troubles, and certainly one of the things you've got to do is to learn to like more things to eat.)

Tomorrow I'll tell what you do in case you can't get the sprouts or the water chestnuts.

Tomorrow—Ans. to Correspondents.

How to Achieve Beauty

MME. HELENA RUBENSTEIN
Health And Beauty Benefits Of Fresh Vegetables

Yesterday I emphasized the value of fresh fruits, and the day before I told you of the benefits that could be gained from Nature's warm weather drinks. Today I am going to put my emphasis on the health and beauty value of fresh vegetables.

In this connection, do not forget what I told you about the value of pot likers—the water that vegetables have been boiled in. The woman who boils her vegetables and who boils her then pours water they were cooked in down the sink is throwing away the most beneficial part of the food. But if anything is more valuable than pot likers or a good dish of cooked vegetables, it is the raw vegetables themselves.

I hope some day we will all put the kitchen range away in moth balls for the summer, as we do our fur coats, and that the woman who entertains her guests at a summer luncheon will have courage enough to pass around a dish of raw carrots and a glass of lemonade.

Certain prominent actresses claim the carrot is one of the greatest beautifiers Nature has to offer. And yet how few of us, comparatively speaking, have carrots served very often at our meals.

Fresh spinach has long been called the "broom of the stomach" and the water in which spinach is cooked is full of health-giving properties.

Fresh cabbage is another vegetable which, though very inexpensive, is one of the best to be had from a health standpoint. There are so many delightful ways to serve raw cabbage that it is too bad not to take advantage of the important vitamins it contains. A delightful manner in which to prepare cabbage for a summer luncheon dish is as follows: Take a head of new cabbage with just enough of the center removed to make a dinner salad, steam the head and then stuff the center with rice and tomato sauce. You will find this dish both delicious and nutritious.

Just at this time of the year, when so many new vegetables are to be had for very little cost, there is no excuse for not serving an abundance of them at all meals and enjoying the benefits they impart to your digestive system.

"I feel that the time is very propitious for this visit of the Legion. The attitude of the French people has changed materially since last August when I was there before. Deep down there is a basis for kindly feeling which only needs an opportunity to bring it to the surface. I had ample opportunity to observe this change of sentiment and the growth of enthusiasm of the French for the return of the American soldier."—General John T. Pershing.

"If capital punishment reduces crime it can only accomplish this by terrorizing those who might possibly commit crime. To have this result, executions should be open, so that every one would know and realize the consequences of a criminal act."—Clarence Darrow.

1911, is a member of the National Commission, A. A. A., and considered one of the strongest in its class in the state.

It will be practically the first time this season the Reserves have engaged a first-class team.

Local fans, a bit downcast over the fact the Reserves have been meeting teams below their class, have not been patronizing games as well as they should.

It is apparent Xenia is represented this season by probably the strongest club in years and measures up to the class of teams playing in the K. I. O. and Central Leagues.

Not being a member of either circuit, the local management has found no end of difficulty in scheduling good teams. For that reason the attendance has fallen off considerably.

Better patronage of the local games on Sunday would enable the Reserves management to make a bigger guarantee to visiting clubs and result in the booking of stronger teams.

FIREMEN MAKE ONE RUN TO FIRE AND 29 MORE IN BALL GAME

When business interferes with pleasure-give up business, is the motto of the Xenia Fire Department.

The call of duty was answered by firemen promptly early Tuesday night just at a time when they were scheduled to begin a soft ball game with the Lang Chevrolet Co. at Cox Memorial Athletic Field.

Firemen made their first run of the day in extinguishing a small blaze on N. Detroit St. and returning to the field, made twenty-nine more runs to defeat the Chevrolet 29 to 16 in a Class B Xenia Playground League game.

The victory gave the firemen undisputed possession of first place. The game was a hotly contested affair for three innings, but in the next five frames, firemen scored twenty-one times while the opposition was being blanked by Pitcher Cope.

Losers staged a belated rally in the ninth, registering nine runs.

Butchers play the Post office Wednesday night.

Reserves fattened their batting averages in the week-end victories over the Springfield Eddie's Tailors and Dayton Andrews Pump team, boosting the team average seven notches to a mark of .335.

Johnson's hitting featured the double win, the Reserve left fielder raising his average exactly 100 points to a mark of .341 by smacking out seven hits.

"Jug" Conley, erstwhile Harshman second baseman, who was a regular member of the local nine last season, appeared in a Reserve uniform in both week-end contests, slugging five hits in seven legal times at bat and scoring seven runs himself.

STARTING JUDGE TO BE BUSY DECLARES HARNESS WRITER

A. E. Staup, Tippecanoe City who has been engaged as starting judge for the three-day harness race meet at the annual Greene County Fair in August, faces a busy time of it this season, according to E. L. Churchill, sport scribe, who, in a recent article, says:

"A. E. Staup, the popular starting judge of Tippecanoe City, O., will surely be a busy man this summer and fall as he has booked some of the best fair and race meetings in the country."

"He will tap the bell for the Xenia races, August 3 to 6 his first 1927 engagement. Several of his former engagements he cannot accept owing to conflict of dates, but his book is almost full."

"Some of the dates contracted for include: Xenia, Ohio, August 3 to 6; La Porte, Ind., August 23 to 26; Bay City, Mich., August 29 to September 1; Dayton, Ohio, September 5 to 8; Eaton, Ohio, September 12 to 16; Jackson, Miss. (State fair), October 17 to 22. This will be Mr. Staup's third year at both La Porte and Eaton and his second at Jackson."

A GREETER IS GREETED

Ambassador Myron T. Herrick, who became the world's most celebrated welcoming committee of one, when he entertained Colonel Charles Lindbergh in Paris, is welcomed in turn by Mayor James J. Walker of New York, an experienced welcomer in his own right.

WICAL STARRING IN SALLY LEAGUE WITH CHARLOTTE OUTFIT

Sensational pitching of Thurman Wical, Greene County product, has been largely instrumental in the recent success of the Charlotte, N. C., "Hornets" in the Sally League, one of the strongest Southern baseball circuits.

Wical did not go so well early in the season but was declared to have more "stuff" on the ball than any other pitcher on the Charlotte staff, and now seems to have come into his own.

Newspaper critics cite for example that his two hurling feats during a week in the latter part of June stand out as the best mound work of the year in the league.

Among other things, he allowed but three runs in the twenty innings pitched. He hurled fifteen innings of scoreless ball, and in twenty innings against Knoxville and Asheville, gave but five bases on balls and allowed but eleven hits.

Wicals work has been highly gratifying to his team which is in second place and fighting Greenville for first position, and is overshadowing the mound work of the other members of the staff.

Wical's home is in Paintersville and he acquired his pitching experience while a member of the Bowersville Bayliffs team.

over my veto. But it was ordained that I should pay the penalty when I came up for re-election in 1926. No effort was made during the campaign to conceal the paramount issue against me. Republican managers openly acknowledged the prospective defeat of Senators Butler, of Massachusetts, and Wadsworth, of New York. Wyoming voters were told that Republican control of the next senate would hang by so slender a thread that it was necessary for Wyoming to assure continued party supremacy in that body. The overthrow of the Democratic state administration was therefore depicted as an urgent national party necessity. In order that if Senator Warren should disappear from the scene, a Republican would be named to succeed him. I failed of re-election by 1,300 votes in a total poll of some 68,000.

Mrs. Ross, who says, like Roosevelt, that she "had a corking good time" in office, is addressing her mainly to the big chautauqua tents manly to women. "We have it in our power," she tells them, "to speak a new language in politics. We have an opportunity to houseclean public life. It is particularly incumbent upon us to use our great voting strength to keep dishonest men out of high official places. We should specialize in thwarting the illicit use of money in primaries and elections. Wyoming is a state with an area larger than that of all New England and most of Ohio combined. My recent campaign cost barely $10,000, despite the immensity of the field. Expenditure of money on the scale revealed in several states can only take place under corrupt circumstances."

From the moment she took office at Cheyenne on January 1, 1925, Mrs. Ross was faced by an overwhelmingly hostile Republican legislature. Fortwith, she asserts, a systematic drive was launched with the object of depriving the governor of authority and prerogatives never before challenged or curtailed. "First," Mrs. Ross explains, "they introduced legislation to take the supervision of banking in Wyoming away from the state administration and turn it over to a commission of hand-picked bankers. FUN FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY

By Flo Frederick

That Bill should hold the money bag is suggested by fellow Ritzie, Tag. The Ritzie club was making money. It hardly seemed possible to the six club members that their little organization should have worked out so well in such a short time. They scarcely knew just how or why it had gotten started, but once under way, each Ritzie had taken such an interest in the club activities that their parties and stunts and things couldn't help but be a success.

This last club enterprise—the raising of minnows for sale—had been their first money-making stunt. Already it had brought them $3.35, which to the six club members seemed like an enormous sum. It was because of this large amount of money that had suddenly come into their hands that they had called a meeting.

President Marty was addressing the fellow club members. By his side on a three-legged stool stood the elephant bank which contained the nickels, dimes and quarters that made up the Ritzie club fortune.

"Fellow Ritzies," he boomed out in his deepest voice, "we are fices. I nominate Bill for treasurer."

"What qualifies him for this position?" continued Marty.

The Ritzies looked from one to another. Of course Bill was honest. What could Marty mean?

"What has he done to make him a worthy Ritzie?" explained Marty.

"He won the marble tournament and saved the Ritzie colors from going to Max Mason and his gang," said Patsy.

"He fixed our fish pond," put in Betty Ann timidly. She was just sure that Bill's feelings had been hurt by Marty's gruff tone and she was going to stick up for him.

"Yes, and he licked Jimmy Perkins yesterday," added Rag. Jimmy Perkins had always been one of Rag's bitterest enemies, and to have him biting the dust at the hands of Bill, who had so recently learned to box, had given Rag keen enjoyment. He would be for Bill every time after that.

This last announcement seemed to settle the argument. If Bill could lick Jimmy Perkins, he could certainly be trusted to defend the Ritzie money bag. This would be no simple matter, either, as the club often took in as high meeting today to appoint a treasurer who will take care of and be responsible for the money made by our club."

"What if he should lose it?" asked Bill, the newest Ritzie.

Marty hammered loudly on the carpenter shop bench with his hammer. "Address me as Mr. Speaker. Don't you realize that this is an important meeting of the Ritzies?"

As this was the first meeting that Bill had attended since his invitation, he became quite awed at Marty's commanding voice. He didn't know that it was Marty's hobby to have the Ritzie meetings as near like the lodge meetings of his father as it was possible to do. All of this formality seemed quite terrifying to him.

"Do I hear a nomination for treasurer?" continued the president.

"Mr. Speaker," addressed Tag, rising stiffly from his chair, "as all the rest of us have club of as a dollar and a half on Saturday afternoon, and if the gang ever found out that Bill was treasurer, they would sure make it hot for him.

When put to a vote, Bill was unanimously elected treasurer of the Ritzie club. Having remained silent since the start of the meeting, he scarcely knew how to receive this honor. And indeed, it was an honor to have the Ritzies put such faith in him.

"I'll sure try to do my best," he managed to say.

Now that their worries were over, knowing that the club money would be carefully guarded, the Ritzies started making plans for a party. Not that they wanted to spend all of their money right away, but it was a nice feeling to know that they had some if they needed it, and they owed the neighborhood gang a party, anyway.

Read about their exciting party plans in tomorrow's paper.

ENGINEER CLAIMS TOWN CAN FINANCE WATER DEPARTMENT

A bond issue of $52,000 in either general indebtedness or general mortgage bonds, and an assessment against property of $42,000 would provide a water supply in operation for Yellow Springs, furnishing water for domestic purposes in practically every home in the village, and fire protection for every building.

These statements were made by E. A. Lawrence, representative of the Jennings-Lawrence engineering firm, Columbus, in addressing a joint meeting of the village council, and the waterworks committee of the town's Civic Club at Yellow Springs Tuesday night.

Representing his firm, Lawrence is making a preliminary survey and estimate of the village for a possible waterworks plant. He declared that the rock underground would necessitate blasting in only one small section of the village, the clearing away one previous objection to the waterworks.

The meeting was adjourned and a public mass meeting called for Thursday night in the council chamber. All interested citizens of the village are invited to attend Thursday's meeting and the discussion at that time will determine the council's future course on the subject. Mr. Lawrence will also be present to answer questions regarding the survey he is making.

EXPLODING PISTOL HURTS CELEBRATOR

John T. Harbine, Jr., Wilmington Pike, lawyer and loan agent, is nursing an injured finger on the right hand a reminder of a Fourth of July accident.

Harbine was having target practice at his home with a .41 caliber Colt revolver when the cylinder exploded, a piece of the metal piercing the end of his trigger finger and exposing the bone.

He thinks it probable a fragment entered the bone, but examination by Dr. B. R. McClellan, who administered first aid, disclosed he had sustained no powder burns.

Harbine had fired less than a dozen shots when the accident occurred.

It was the lone "Glorious Fourth" accident reported.

Clear, White, Smooth Hands Are Beautiful

Manicuring alone can not make the hands beautiful. The skin itself must be soft, firm, white, and youthful. The easiest way to do this is to mix the juice of two lemons with three ounces of Orchard White, and massage this sweetly fragrant lemon bleach daily into the hands and arms. It will make even stained, toil-worn hands soft, clear, smooth and white.

All dealers have Orchard White, adv.

Does your daughter attend school regularly?

MANY GIRLS are absent from school for a few days each month because of illness. In many cases this is unnecessary because young girls—as well as older women—can be strengthened by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Girls suffering from run-down condition, sleeplessness, nervousness, and loss of appetite, should gain new strength and vigor from this Vegetable Compound.

The following testimonials show what the Compound has done for other schoolgirls.

NERVOUS AND DIZZY

Charleston, Illinois:—"I gave my fifteen-year-old girl Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it did her a wonderful lot of good. She was nervous, weak and dizzy. At last she was so good that she was out of school for four months. The Vegetable Compound has improved her in every way and she has gone back to school. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to other mothers with girls who are not as strong as they should be." Mrs. Alice Louthan, Route 2, Charleston, Illinois.

Remember this package.

SICK AND WEAK

Camden, New Jersey:—"When my daughter was twelve years old she was hurt at the playground. She was sick and weak for some time after that and was not able to go to school regularly. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped her wonderfully, and she now goes to school every day. She has gained in weight and has a better appetite than she had before taking it." "Natiee, darling, would you—can you love such an unworthy person as I?"

WHAT HAS HAPPENED:

Philip Wynne Tracy IV has had a childish engagement with Nattie Jones. Becoming interested in Nattie, he finds himself falling in love with her. Nattie, overhearing him making love to Nattie, breaks her engagement.

America enters the World War and Phil is one of the first to enlist. Just before leaving for France he meets Nattie again and they plan to be married. The immediate departure of the troops, however, prevents this. The regiment is ordered to France and Phil is wounded and decorated for bravery.

After the armistice, Phil comes home to face with his mother, who has come to France to hunt for him. She is accompanied by Major Aukland, who is devoted to her. Mrs. Tracy learns with dismay that Phil intends to marry Nattie, a rich French divorcee. Phil compromises with his mother. He will refuse Major Aukland's proposal of marriage, he will give up Nattie for two years. They return to America.

Mrs. Tracy invites Nattie to their home. Nattie seems cold and distant and Phil is then convinced that she is interested in Jerry Kenyon, her father's young business partner.

About this time Phil receives a letter from Nattie telling him that a marriage has been arranged between herself and a wealthy Frenchman. Sick at heart, Phil's thoughts turn to Nattie and he goes to her. Fearing for Nattie's future if their unhallowed love continues, Nattie sends him away from her with a lie. Disillusioned, Phil realizes his only chance of happiness is with Nattie if he can but win her again. He drives madly all night in his haste to get to her. He finds Nattie at her old home leaning against the old trusting tree.

CHAPTER LIX A NEW GENERATION IS BEGINNING

PHILIP TRACY stopped the car beside the old elm tree.

"Nattie," he said, "I spoke her name. She turned her head and looked vacantly at him.

"Nattie," he said, "I have come for you." He got out and opened the door of his car.

"My own car will be here in a minute," she said.

In an instant he was beside her. "Nattie, why do I find you so early in the morning at our tree?"

"It is not 'our' tree, Philip Tracy," he noted with despair that she called him "Philip." "It is Rod's tree, followed by all the times he tried to comfort me. The last time I really saw him was here the night before he went away forever, and I had nothing better to give him than that to tell him I was glad he was going because I knew he would take care—oh, it is too horrible. Even at the time he had made his last gesture of love for me and for you; both of us unworthy."

"What are you talking about Nattie?" asked Phil, who had not understood anything she was saying. "Don't you know? Were you not notified?"

"No, I was away from the house all day yesterday. Come, get in the car and tell me all about it."

AFTER a slight hesitation, Nattie Jones entered the blue roadster and sat close to the fur coat which Phil had kept on all through this long night's ride.

With the feel of her next to him, he got back all he had been longing for; all he had never found since that night when they took their first ride in the other blue roadster.

"Nattie, sweetheart, now that I've got you again, I'll never let you go." The girl nestled around his arm up into his face. "I promised Jerry Kenyon last night that I would tell him today whether I would be his wife or not."

"How does he look with two front teeth out?" Phil's voice was triumphant. He had arrived in time!

Nattie laughed. It was the same old incorrigible Wynne; the one she had lost the night of the party.

"Wynne, you are a brute. The sight of his disfigured face was what made me let him think that maybe at last I would say 'yes.' But you are not driving me toward my place."

"I know it."

"Where are you going?"

"I don't hardly know myself, Nattie. It will depend upon you."

"Wynne Tracy, when did anything that you wanted to do depend upon me?"

Phillip turned a radiant face toward her. She had called him by the old love name again. She had called him "Wynne." He would tell her now. He would put it to the test!

"Since the time you and I used to ride on the front seats of your father's milk wagons," he answered.

Phil felt Nattie come even a little closer to him.

"Darling, I am taking you into some outside town where we will find a judge or a minister, and be married."

"Are you crazy, Wynne?"

"No, I think I have just become sane."

"I love you, Nattie; have always loved you and always will love you. I was not thoroughly conscious of this until last night, and then my only ambition was to go to you as quickly as possible and tell you so."

I was a great way from you, both in body and spirit, when I found this wonderful thing out, and I have driven all night, hoping, praying, that I might not be too late.

"Nattie, darling, do you—can you love such a foolish, unworthy person as I? If you can't, the world will be a living hell to me. I know you deserve some better man, and I think I could have given you up to Rod, if you had told me you loved him, but I can't think you love Jerry Kenyon, and I'm going to take you away from him."

"I am going to keep you forever more, just for myself, for without you, sweetheart, I would be lost to everything."

NATLIEE had said nothing, but her face had become as bright as the morning, as she snuggled further into the embrace of Philip's arm.

"What will your mother say, Wynne?" she asked after a long silence.

"She can say nothing, but I think she will be glad. Nattie, do you know that now, for the first time since I came home, I feel that there is something in the future for me. We will do great things together, dear. I wish old Rod was here."

"He is here, Phil. I told you the truth at the tree. I was keeping a tryst with him there this morning. Do you know that before Rod went to France he made his will and left everything he had in the world to you and me—my two truest and best friends, whom I hope will in time become one," said the will, which I read yesterday, and which you would have done had you been here. Strange we should have gotten this message from him just at this time."

"When I got home from the attorney's office, Dad called me over to his house and told me Jerry's version of the fight. Jerry came later, and between them they made me decide to tell Jerry today that I would marry him. I did not rest much last night, Wynne. About 12 o'clock I dropped asleep, however, and in a dream I saw you in a blue car coming toward me at a terrific pace, calling, 'I'm coming, Nattie, wait for me.'"

"That is what I did say, Nattie, and now that I am here, will you marry me this morning? You can go with me to get the license, and then we will rout the preacher out of bed to marry us. After that, we will go back to the hotel and have breakfast."

"Wynne," it was a timid little voice that spoke his name. "Don't you think it would be very cruel to rout the minister out of bed, and, besides, the place where you get the license would probably not be open until 9 o'clock. Let's get our breakfast now. I am very hungry."

"So am I, but I did not know it. Someone always has to suggest things to me. Miss Jones, may I have the pleasure of breakfasting with you for the last time?"

Nattie raised a startled face to him. "The next time we breakfast together, Nattie, you will be Mrs. Philip Wynne Tracy, sweetheart."

It seemed only a few minutes after-ward to Nattie Jones that, breakfast over, license obtained, she was standing in the little living-room of the parsonage, and the minister was saying: "I pronounce you husband and wife."

Then racing back to Philip's home. As they reached the front of the house, Phil made a great honking of the horn, and finally brought his mother to the window.

"Now, Mum, I've got her! I've got her! Isn't she a beauty?"

It was not necessary to explain to Anne Tracy what had happened. "Come up here immediately, you two. I want to kiss my daughter," she called from the window.

"Can't do it now, Mum. We're going over to beard Nattie's legs. If we're not shot full of holes, we'll come back for a day."

ANNE TRACY sat motionless as they whirled down the street and out of sight. Finally she turned from the window and looked about the room. It was already lonely.

From now on it would probably grow lonelier each day. She tried to peer into the future; to find some hope that she might cling to.

She seated herself on the old familiar chaise longue. The unbidden tears ran down her cheeks. This was a mother's destiny. She it was who had suffered and battled and prayed that this son would grow to be a man worthier than his father—yet before she had finished her work another woman had taken him, and they would carry on together, while she was alone.

Another woman was taking up the duties of wife and mother; a new generation was beginning. She turned her head from the light of the window; the tears were coming faster.

There was a knock at the door. Nonnie came in. She, too, had seen Philip and Nattie, and needed no explanation of Mrs. Tracy's tear-stained face.

"Don't you worry, Mrs. Tracy. Things aren't ever so bad as they seem," and, with a smile, she handed her a card.

"When I got home from the attorney's office, Dad called me over to his house and told me Jerry's version of the fight. Jerry came later,
